This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1888 edition. Excerpt: ...volume, and which is very full in its details of the last days and hours of his venerable father, this saying which I have quoted, and which is more interesting and valuable than any other of the good man's dying sayings, is not recorded. I have asked many persons, who might be supposed to know, what reason could exist for such an omission, but never heard even a conjectural explanation. The father was the most eminent theological teacher ever raised up in this country. The son was the most accomplished clergyman in the Presbyterian Church of his day. His failure to leave on the imperishable pages of his father's biography this dying testimony to the catholic Christian faith which his departing spirit trusted in as the sum and substance of all divine truth, is to my mind one of the unsolved mysteries of religious literature. THE SICK STUDENT.-THE ACADEMY ENDOWMENT.--LICENSED TO PREACHING AT FAIRFIELD. N less than three months after entering the seminary I was "used up." Incessant study, disturbed sleep or none, little exercise and strong mental excitement, to say nothing of the diet in commons, brought on dyspepsia. I went home during the Christmas holidays, and on my return to the seminary was attacked with inflammation of the lungs. The disease was so violent, and resisted all remedies with such obstinacy, that my life was despaired of. My parents and brother and sisters came on to Princeton to be with me. I recovered, and early in March was able to be taken home. But my lungs were in such a state that it was out of the question for me to think of returning to the seminary to study, and the idea of my ever being able to speak in public was...
