Wordcraft Circle of Native Writers & Storytellers "Writer of the Year, 2005". The five-volume "American Indian Contributions to the World" set introduces the many important inventions and discoveries of the indigenous peoples of North, Central, and South America throughout history. Covering much of the same content - and more - as the critically acclaimed, award-winning "Encyclopedia of American Indian Contributions to the World", this new set by the same author team now presents the material in a way specifically organized, written, and designed for young readers, making it fun and accessible. From the popcorn popper, chocolate, and potatoes to igloos and kayaks, from geometry, zero, and sign language to insect repellents, blowguns, and hockey, these engaging references examine everything in fascinating detail. The box features highlight special themes, inventions, and people, and numerous black-and-white photographs and detailed maps make each book visually stimulating. With timelines at the end of most chapters, a glossary of ancient cultures, an appendix of maps, an appendix listing tribes by culture area, a further reading list, and a comprehensive index, these easy-to-use books are invaluable references for young readers.
