Marcella Cucina by Hazan, Marcella (1997) Hardcover

Marcella Hazan (1924 - 2013) was an Italian cookery writer whose books were published in English. Her cookbooks are credited with introducing the public in the United States and Britain to the techniques of traditional Italian cooking. She was widely considered by chefs and fellow food writers to be one of the foremost authorities on Italian cuisine. Hazan was born in the area of Emilia-Romagna in Italy. She earned a doctorate in natural sciences and biology from the University of Ferrara. In 1955 she married Victor Hazan and moved with him to New York. Hazan began giving cooking lessons in her apartment, and opened her own cooking school, The School of Classic Italian Cooking, in 1969. In the early 1970s, Craig Claiborne, who was then the food editor of the New York Times, asked her to contribute recipes to the paper. She published her first book, The Classic Italian Cook Book, in 1973. Since then, Marcella was hailed as the queen of Italian cooking in America. Filled with the passion and personality of its author, this book is not only full of fine food and its careful preparation but the personal reminiscences and penetrating commentary about the sensual pleasure of food and its place in our lives. In vivid introductory essays and seductive headnotes, the narrative of an extraordinary culinary life unfolds. With each memory of a trip, a meal, or a flavor, we are treated to the perspective of a great cook and teacher - one who believes that the finest Italian cooking is found in the home. In MARCELLA CUCINA she focuses on regional cooking, turning her sharp eye to every area of Italy and offering a rich array of flavors and textures from cities and villages alike.
