Lend Me A Tenor and Other Plays (Contemporary Playwrights) Ken Ludwig

LEND ME A TENOR is about parents versus children: the tearing down by youth of the barriers set up by the older generation who seek to foil the natural urges of their children. At the same time, LEND ME A TENOR is about the encouragement of youth by their natural heroes, who are ironically, usually of their parents generations.

MOON OVER BUFFALO is about second chances and about the courage that is needed to take a second chance.

LEADING LADIES continues the theme of second chance, issues of compromise and social barriers.

SHAKESPEARE IN HOLLYWOOD has a whole different set of concerns. It is about falling in love and dreaming. It is about myth and magic. It is about a time in our history when censorship took on frightening proportions both in the world of film and the world at large.
