The Martial Arts History Museum: How it all began Michael Matsuda

To most historians, the martial arts itself is said to be thousands upon thousands of years old. Although an exact date of conception can not be accurately validated, the lineage of the arts is beyond measure. As a Museum focusing our efforts on martial arts history, it is important that we make every attempt to be as accurate as possible. This is why we continue to request resource information and materials of validation so that we can conduct a thorough search for verification of the facts. Because so many of the martial arts historical information has been passed down from one generation to the next by word-of-mouth, it's important that we begin some form of consistent documentation. It is my hope the Museum will one day serve as a primary resource for martial arts information. This book is the story of how it all began with the historic opening of The Martial Arts History Museum.
